Lester Aldridge Awarded ISO 27001 Certification for Information Security

Lester Aldridge has been awarded ISO 27001 Certification for its information security management systems across the law firm's three offices in Bournemouth, Southampton and London.

ISO27001 is the international standard for information security that provides guidelines for businesses on implementing the best information security policies and procedures. It provides a range of controls and compliance obligations to be deployed within an organisation to manage its information assets and allows external assessment to assist in verifying the effectiveness of those controls.

"I am extremely proud that following independent assessment we have been awarded ISO 27001 certification, the highest international standard for information security", said Lester Aldridge's Managing Partner Matthew Barrow. "With data breaches becoming increasingly common, we wanted to adopt a proactive approach to managing and minimising risk exposure. Earning this certification demonstrates our commitment to ensuring our clients' information security."
