

Matthew Barrow Re-elected as Managing Partner

Leading South Coast law firm Lester Aldridge has confirmed that Matthew Barrow has been re-elected managing partner for another four-year term.

Matthew started his new term on 1 May after the firm's partners voted unanimously to hand him a new term at the helm of the firm.

Matthew began his career at Lester Aldridge in 1999 as a trainee solicitor. He became partner in 2007, followed by head of the real estate group in 2011, before becoming managing partner of the firm on 1 May 2018.

Suki Samra, Chair of Lester Aldridge, said: "Matthew has led us through some extraordinary and challenging times in the last few years and has done so through hard work and dedication. He has achieved an enormous amount for the firm in a short space of time, putting in place and implementing our strategy of growth and making LA a great place to work.

"On behalf of all the partners and staff at LA, I would like to congratulate Matthew on this great achievement."

Commenting on his re-appointment, Matthew Barrow, Lester Aldridge's Managing Partner, said: "It is a huge privilege to continue as managing partner and I would like to thank everyone for their continued support. It is a privilege to work with such a talented and dedicated team. We have an exciting strategy for the firm and I look forward to building on our success in the coming years."